

MAKING GOOD

There is no way of making lasting friends like "Making Good"; and Dr. Pierce's medicines well exemplify this, and their friends, after more than two decades of popularity are numbered by the hundreds of thousands. They have "made good" and they have not made drunkards. A good, honest square-deal medicine of known composition is

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It still enjoys an immense sale, while most of the preparations that have come into prominence in the earlier period of its popularity have "gone by the board" and are never more heard of. There must be some reason for this long-time popularity and that is to be found in its superior merits. When once given a fair trial for weak stomach, or for liver and blood affections, its superior curative qualities are soon manifest; hence it has survived and grown in popular favor, while scores of less meritorious articles have suddenly flashed into favor for a brief period and then been as soon forgotten.

For a torpid liver with its attendant indigestion, dyspepsia, headache, perhaps dizziness, foul breath, nasty coated tongue, with bitter taste, loss of appetite, with distress after eating, nervousness and debility, nothing is as good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It's an honest, square-deal medicine with all its ingredients printed on bottle-wrapper—no secret, no hocus-pocus humbug, therefore don't accept a substitute that the dealer may make a little bigger profit. Insist on your right to have what you call for. Don't buy

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Expecting it to prove a "cure-all." It is only advised for woman's special ailments.

It makes weak women strong, sick women well. Less advertised than some preparations sold for like purposes, its sterling curative virtues still maintain its position in the front ranks, where it stood over two decades ago.

As an invigorating tonic and strengthening nerve it is unequalled. It won't satisfy those who want "booze," for there is not a drop of alcohol in it.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, the original Little Liver Pills, although the first pill of their kind in the market, still lead, and when once tried are ever afterwards in favor. Easy to take as candy.

DAMAGES $50,000

There was no question about John Denison, the banker in the suburban village of Clyde, being a good husband and a fond father. When his nineteen-year-old daughter, Clara, first got the idea into her head she figured that she would only have to ask papa and the thing was as good as done. When the asking took place she met with a surprise party.

"Buy you a runaway?" he answered. "Certainly not! You cannot be trusted with such a thing. In a month I should have three or four suits for damages, and the house would be turned into a hospital to boot."

"You know grandpa put $500 in your bank for me. That will buy the runaway and pay for any damages I may do. If I run over anybody it won't hurt them more than $50 worth. Do give your consent. Think of three other girls riding about in their own machines and sticking up their noses at me!"

"But you must settle all damage suits," he said at last.

The runaway was purchased and arrived. Percy Markham also arrived. He had an aunt in the village, and he arrived to see her. It was said of him that he was well-to-do financially, about twenty-five years old, reasonably good-looking, and that he had some great trouble on his mind. When he walked abroad he held his head down. That is always a sign in a young man that he has trouble gnawing at his heart. In an old man it simply signifies that he is looking to find a quarter in the road.

Miss Clara Denison had been running that runaway exactly a week, when she turned a bend in the village street one afternoon at a gait of twenty-five miles an hour. Her instructor had cautioned her that it was easier to dodge things at that gait than it was standing still. As the machine turned from one direction Mr. Markham turned from the other. Miss Clara was looking at a hat in a shop window, and Mr. Markham's eyes were on the ground at his feet. Some one yelled. Then some one screamed. Then there was a bump, and some one went into the ditch and there were more things for the downcast Mr. Markham to think about.

The victim of the head-on collision was conveyed to the house of his aunt, and a doctor attended his contusions. At the bank, Mr. Denison heard that there would be a $5,000 suit for damages.

In eight days Mr. Markham limped out. He was crossing the street to get to the post office, and his eyes were on the gravel, when that runaway turned in from another street. None of the spectators of what occurred computed the gait at more than twenty-three miles an hour. Some said it was only 22½. Whatever it was in miles, rods, feet and inches, however, it was enough for Mr. Markham. He went down under the impact and was borne away by the sympathizing public.

When he finally emerged it was to visit the drug store for more arnica. As he was on the sidewalk, he probably felt that he had a legal right to look down. As Clara Denison was in the middle of the street with her runaway about she probably felt that she had a legal right to hit up the speed a little to pass a carriage. But Fate was there. The machine took the bits in its mouth and ran up on the walk, and Mr. Markham was sent to his aunt's on a stretcher for the third time. A third suit for damages!

"What are you going to do about these suits?" asked the father when he heard of the latest. "You remember I told you that it would be at your own risk. Nice mess you have got into!"

There was no reply, and the girl didn't seem to be worried. She continued to use the machine, but Mr. Markham had had his innings and was run down no more. So far as the banker knew, the young man had left the town. As to the suits, he wondered why they were not called, but refused to be worried. When the time came of course he would back his daughter.

Weeks passed, and then one day he was rather startled by the announcement:

"Papa, I have been financing again in the interests of your bank. I saw I could never pay the amount of Mr. Markham's three suits, and so—so—"

"So what?"

"He has called here quite a number of times, and I guess he wants to speak to you this evening. I guess he does."

"I shan't pay him a cent to settle the cases," was the reply.

"Oh, it isn't that. That's no financing. It's about my running over him and making him fall in love with me!"

The Quiet of the Home.

"What I want," the young man said, "is to get married and have a peaceful, quiet home."

"Well," said the widower of a couple, "sometimes it works that way, and then again sometimes it's like joinin' a debatin' society."

Hard Luck.

"He was praising her hair today. I was so angry."

"Why?"

"Because I couldn't tell him she had borrowed it from me."

Those Bad Spells.

Lebanon Jet., Ky.—Mrs. Minnie Lamb, of this place, says: "I believe I would have been dead by now, had it not been for Cardui. I have not had one of those bad spells since I commenced to use this medicine." Cardui is a specific medicine for the ills from which women suffer. Made from harmless, vegetable ingredients, Cardui is a safe, reliable remedy, and has been successfully used by weak and ailing women for more than fifty years. Thousands of women have been helped back to health and happiness by its use. Why not profit by their experience? A trial will convince you that Cardui is just what you need.

AMUSEMENTS

The attraction at Holland's Opera House, Friday night, March 31, is A. G. Delamater and William Norris, Incorporated, Original Studebaker Theatre, Chicago, production of George Barr McCutcheon's most popular and best selling novel "Beverly," as dramatized from the novel "Beverly of Graustark," by Robert M. Baker. In the play the lines of the book have been very closely followed by the author, and the result is an almost perfect dramatization of a most fascinating story. No expense has been spared by the producers as to cost or scenic equipment which add materially in the delightful presentation of the play.

"THE GOLDEN GIRL."

The musical comedy, "The Golden Girl" will be the attraction at Holland's Opera House, April 3. This beautiful Chicago success is under the management of Mort H. Singer, who has favored the theatre-goers of the country with such high-class musical comedies as "A Stubborn Cinderella," "Princes of Tonight," "The Goddess of Liberty" and many others that have been pronounced decided hits, which he sent forth from Chicago's foremost theatre, the Princess. "The Golden Girl" will be the big musical treat of the season and will no doubt be greeted by a large audience upon its visit here.
